WHAT IS A LOCAL HISTORIC STRUCTURE OR SITE?

A local historic structure or local historic site designation may be placed on any improvement parcel, natural area, improvement, or any area of particular historic, architectural, archeological or cultural significance to the City of Appleton, the state or the nation, which is determined to have historical significance.

WHERE DO I START?

Contact the Community and Economic Development Department to discuss interest in Local Historic Structure and/or Site designation.

WHAT'S NEXT?

A complete submittal includes a completed application signed by the property owner(s) with the following supplementary information: a statement by the applicant outlining reasons and justification for requesting local historic structure and/or site nomination, a to-scale map with property lines, dimensions, location of all buildings and distances to property lines, a legal description of the lots included in the proposed designation, photographs of the front, sides, and rear of the (including photographs of outbuildings), and information about the architectural style, foundations, roof, wall, porch, windows and other applicable historic elements.

The Historic Preservation Commission holds a Public Hearing to review staff and public comments, determine whether or not the application satisfies designation criteria contained in Section 23-651(i) of the Zoning Ordinance. A notice of the Public Hearing (Class 2) is sent to the petitioner, Alderperson of the district, and owners of record for any property in whole or in part situated within 100 feet of the proposed nominated structure or site at least 10 days prior to the Public Hearing. The Historic Preservation Commission's recommendation for the designation is made to the Community and Economic Development Committee at the close of the Public Hearing. The Community and Economic Development Committee makes a recommendation to the Common Council.

WHAT IS THE FINAL ACTION?

Common Council approval is the final action for a Local Historic Site and/or Structure designation. Upon Council action, the City Clerk sends written notice of the action taken by the Common Council to the property owners or owner's agent, Community and Economic Development Department, Inspections Supervisor and the City Assessor.

City of Appleton Historic Structure, or Site Designation Criteria

Criteria 1: That are identified with important events or exemplify or reflect the broad cultural, political, economic or social history of the nation, state or community; or

This criterion relates to events associated with the property can be either a specific event marking an important moment in national, state or City of Appleton history or with a pattern of events or a historic movement that made a significant contribution to the development of the United States, State of Wisconsin, or the City of Appleton.

The property that is being evaluated must be documented, through accepted means of historical or archeological research, to have existed at the time of the event or pattern of events and to have been strongly associated with those events. A property is not eligible if its associations are merely speculative. Mere association with historic events or trends is not enough to qualify under this criterion. The property's specific association must be considered of the highest importance.

Criteria 2: Are identified with historic personages in national, state or local history; or

This criterion relates to properties associated with individuals whose specific contributions to national, state or City of Appleton history can be identified and documented. The person(s) associated with the property must be individually exceptionally significant within a national, state or City of Appleton historic context. The association must be with the person's productive life, reflecting the time period when he or she achieved significance. Properties that pre- or post-date an individual's significant accomplishments are usually not eligible. The individual's association with the property must be documented by accepted methods of historical or archeological research.

Criteria 3: Embody the distinguishing characteristics of an architectural type or specimen inherently valuable for a study of a period, style, method of construction, or of indigenous materials or craftsmanship, or that represents a significant and distinguishable entity whose components lack individual distinction; or

This criterion's intent is to qualify exceptionally important works of design or collective elements of design extraordinarily significant as an ensemble, such as a historic district. It applies to properties significant for their physical design or construction, including such elements as architecture and engineering. The property must clearly illustrate the physical features or traits that commonly recur in individual types, periods or methods of construction. A property also must clearly contain enough of those characteristics to be considered one of the best representatives of a particular type, period, or method of construction. (Characteristics can be expressed in terms such as form, proportion, structure, plan, style, or materials.) A building or structure is a specimen of its type or period of construction if it is an exceptionally important example (within its context) of design or building practices of a particular time in history. The language is restrictive in requiring that a candidate be "a specimen exceptionally valuable for the study of a period, style, or method of construction" rather than simply embodying distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction. With regard to historic districts, an entity must be distinctive and exceptional. This criterion will not qualify all of the works of a master, per se, but only such works that are exceptional or extraordinary.

Criteria 4: Are representative of the notable work of a master builder, designer or architect who influenced his age; or

This criterion relates to properties that have been constructed by a notable master builder, designer or architect or did the notable master builder, designer or architect have historical associations that either influenced architecture in the City of Appleton or had a role in the development or history of Appleton.

Criteria 5: Have yielded, or may be likely to yield, information important to prehistory or history

This criterion recognizes archeological properties, all of which must be evaluated under this criterion.

The National Register defines an archeological property as the place or places where the remnants of a past culture survive in a physical context that allows for the interpretation of these remains. It is this physical evidence of the past and its patterning that is the archeologist's data base. The physical evidence, or archeological remains, usually takes the form of artifacts (e.g., fragments of tools or ceramic vessels), features (e.g., remnants of walls, cooking hearths, or trash middens), and ecological evidence (e.g., pollens remaining from plants that were in the area when the activities occurred).

Properties being considered under this criterion must address two questions:

- 1) What locally significant information is the site likely to yield? and
- 2) Is the information already produced locally important?

Answers to both questions must be well documented and logically organized. In order to establish the local significance of an archeological resource, it must be demonstrated how the data has made or will make a major contribution to the existing writings by particular person, on a particular subject. This criterion requires that potentially recoverable data are likely to revolutionize or substantially modify a major historic theme in history or prehistory, resolve a substantial historical or anthropological debate, or close a serious gap in a major theme of local history or prehistory.

The current existence of appropriate physical remains must be ascertained in considering a property's ability to yield important information. Properties that have been partly excavated or otherwise disturbed and that are being considered for their potential to yield additional important information must be shown to retain that potential in their remaining portions.

Properties that have yielded important information in the past and that no longer retain additional research potential (such as completely excavated archeological sites) must be assessed essentially as historic sites under Criterion 1. Such sites must be significant for associative values related to:

- 1) the importance of the data gained or
- 2) the impact of the property's role in the history of the development of anthropology/ archeology or other relevant disciplines.

Summary:

When determining historic significance and evaluating a resource against the Historic Preservation Ordinance criteria above, the Historic Preservation Commission often ask the following questions:

- Is the site or structure an outstanding example of past architectural styles or craftsmanship?
- Was the site or structure created by a “master” architect, builder, or designer?
- Did the architect, building or designer have historical associations that either influenced architecture in the city or had a role in the development or history of Appleton?
- Has the building retained “integrity”? Does it still convey its historic significance through the retention of its original design and materials?
- Is the site or structure associated with important historic events or historic personages that shaped the growth, development, or evolution of Appleton?
- Is the site or structure associated with important movements or trends that shaped the social and cultural history of Appleton?
