

Socialize Your Dog

All pets require some degree of social interaction in order to develop and maintain a healthy and social temperament. Outdoor dogs should never be left tethered or penned for long periods of time.

Dogs left alone for long periods become frustrated and often exhibit aggressive and/or destructive behavior such as chewing, biting, excessive barking or whining, pacing, or a combination of these potentially dangerous and undesirable behaviors.

Dogs are pack animals and need the socialization that a pack provides to its members. Individuals or families that acquire and keep dogs must understand that they are responsible for fulfilling the social needs of a dog with it becomes part of their “pack”.

Dogs should be walked and played with indoors or out and have some type of social interaction with its family on a daily basis.

If you do not have time to spend with your dog or cat and cannot provide the proper food, shelter, license, vaccinations, and veterinary care when needed, then owning an animal may not be for you.

Safety Rules to Follow

- ⇒ Never leave children unsupervised with a dog or cat.
- ⇒ Don't play “tug-of-war” games with dogs as it encourages aggressive behavior.
- ⇒ Don't approach or touch a dog or cat without the permission of its owner. Better yet, let the animal get used to you before you touch it.
- ⇒ Recognize aggressive behavior: barking, snarling, teeth bared, muzzle tense and wrinkled, tail straight up or straight down but stiff, ears back, hackles raised, staring.
- ⇒ If walking your dog be observant. Do not let your dog pass too close to another dog (or person) if either dog is displaying fearful or aggressive behaviors upon approach.

Dogs Kept Outdoors

It is a mistaken belief that cats and dogs can withstand cold temperatures because they have fur. How well your animal does in cold weather depends on more than just its breed. No dog or cat can withstand extreme temperatures for extended periods of time without proper shelter.

A sturdy shelter just large enough for the dog to stand up, turn around, and lie down in is of sufficient size. A shelter that is too large for the dog will not allow the dog to conserve its body heat. The shelter should be wind and rain proof. Face the shelter away from the wind. Place a heavy flap over the opening to protect the animal from the wind. The shelter should be raised several inches off the ground to prevent water and snow from entering the shelter. Provide the animal with clean, dry bedding for insulation. Provide fresh water daily and in adequate amounts. Ice and snow are not acceptable substitutes from fresh water.

Cats

Remember, city leash laws and all other animal ordinances also pertain to cats. Do not let cats run at large off your property. Cats are predatory by nature and often kill wildlife such as songbirds. Cats that are not sterilized and run at large contribute to the over population of stray and feral cats. Cats that run free are likely to attack or be attacked and injured by other wildlife that may carry the rabies virus.

Cats are safest kept indoors. If your cat enjoys the outdoors, put him or her on a leash and supervise the cat while it is outdoors. Tethered animals, cats and dogs, are vulnerable to attack by other unleashed dogs or cats and cannot retreat from an attack when tethered and alone outdoors.

Animals at Large

Animals found running at large where the owner cannot be immediately determined or contacted for retrieval of their animal, will be transported and held at the Fox Valley Humane Association at the owner's expense. Contact the Fox Valley Humane Association at (920) 733-1717 for information concerning their hours of operation, licensing, vaccination requirements, and fees associated with the release of an animal to its owner or caretaker.
